Rationale	The Department of Education envisions to continuously improve itself to better serve its stakeholders. One way of achieving this is through the Continuous Improvement Program. By observing best practices in continuous improvement, the different levels of governance can determine ways to continue providing services while analyzing improvement opportunities along the way, based on gender equality perspective. Continuous improvement, which is the foundation of organizational success, is a method of identifying opportunities for refining processes and reducing waste. Working to constantly improve is a primary strategy in which many organizations curtail operational expenses. Continuous improvement aids in streamlining workflows, ultimately saving valuable resources and enhancing productivity by reducing wasted time and effort. To foster a culture of innovation, adaptability, and efficiency, it is imperative to equip school leaders with the necessary skills and mindset for continuous improvement. However, as observed, there are gaps in terms of work flow in some of the processes in schools, district and division office which can occasionally diminish productivity, therefore resulting to customer dissatisfaction.

This activity will train the school leaders and process owners to have incremental initiatives and innovations to achieve best practices and advocate maximum delivery of services to the customers regardless of gender. After this training, participants will be coached for 6 months to work on a project which will integrate gender equality considerations. In general, investing in continuous improvement training is an investment in the future success and sustainability of our organization. By empowering school leaders with the knowledge, skills, and mindset to drive positive change, we can unlock untapped potential, enhance operational efficiency, and stay ahead in the education sector. This is a journey towards a culture of continuous improvement and excellence.
